

West Bellevue Market Review

Q1

Real estate statistics for the first quarter of 2016

The lack of available homes for sale in West Bellevue remains critical. Inventory, which traditionally increases in the spring, continued to shrink. As demand far outstripped supply, home prices in West Bellevue kept moving upward.

- With under a month's supply of properties on the market, homes are selling quickly and often with multiple offers.
- Of the West Bellevue homes that sold in March, two-thirds sold in less than 15 days, and two-thirds also sold for over list price.
- The red hot market allows sellers to call the shots. Since some sellers are hesitant to put their home on the market for fear they won't be able to find their next home quickly enough, many are negotiating with buyers to stay in their house for several months after the sale to ease the transition.
- In the first quarter, Windermere brokers were involved in 50 percent of the real estate transactions in West Bellevue.
